NEWS OF AND FROM MEMBERS

Angelos Chaniotis published, as an appendix to an article about Aphrodisias in Caria, "Inscriptions from Bucak Köyü (Ancient Syneta?)," in American Journal of Archaeology 102 (April 1998), 248-50.

Henry R. Immerwahr has finished a preliminary version of his Corpus of Attic Vase Inscriptions (CAVI). This preliminary edition is in five volumes and contains 8,137 items. There is a Greek index. Except for merchants' marks, the aim has been to include all writing, painted or scratched, found on Attic pottery. Hard copies of the corpus exist at present at the University of North Carolina, the American School of Classical Studies in Athens, and the Beazley Archive, Ashmolean Museum, Oxford. An electronic copy has been sent to the Packard Humanities Institute for inclusion in the next version of the PHI disk containing the Greek inscriptions.

Members may be interested in Elias Kapetanopoulos' Website at <http://www.history.ccsu.edu/elias/elias.htm> >. The section entitled DHMOSIEUSEIS contains various items of interest and use to epigraphers, among them an updatable list of Athenian archons from the time of Augustus on, and a list of the ephebic catalogues known from the time of the Roman Empire.

The recent Journal of Roman Archaeology (Volume 11, 1998) contained several items of interest to epigraphers, mostly review articles or long reviews:

John Bodel, "Updating the CIL for Italy: part 3," pp. 485-498.

Harriet Flower, "The Significance of an Inscribed Breastplate Captured at Falerii Veteres in 241 BC," pp. 224-32 with figs. 1-3 in colour (after p. 160).

Jerzy Linderski, "Updating the CIL for Italy: part 2," pp. 458-484.

Francisco Beltrán Lloris, "Las inscripciones romanas de Barcelona," pp. 605-610.

F. Millar, "The Inscriptions of Rome: Recovery, Recording and Interpretation," pp. 431-436.

David Potter, "Senatus consultum de Cn. Pisone," pp. 436-457 and including an English translation of the text.

John B. Wilkins, "The Iguvine Tables, Umbrian Civilization, and Indo-European Studies," pp. 426-430.

CALL FOR PAPERS FOR 1999: EPIGRAPHY AND RELIGION

ASGLE will sponsor a session of papers at the December 1999 Annual Meetings. The topic will be Epigraphy and Religion. This panel aims to provide a representative sampling of the ways in which inscriptional evidence contributes to our knowledge of ancient, especially Greek and Roman, religions. To this end papers on a wide variety of themes are invited and a balance of topics among them will be sought. Abstracts of 500 to 800 words, for papers 15 to 20 minutes in length, are invited from all interested scholars. You do not need to be a member of ASGLE to participate in this panel. Please send three copies, to arrive by February 1, 1999, to John Bodel, Department of Classics, Rutgers University, 131 George St., New Brunswick, NJ 08901-1414. For further information, please see the July 1998 issue of this Newsletter.

POST-DOCTORAL FELLOWSHIPS AT OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY

The Center for Epigraphical and Palaeographical Studies at The Ohio State University offers short-term fellowships (of one to four months duration) to support visitors pursuing post-doctoral research in Greek and Latin history and epigraphy. The fellowships pay for travel to and from Columbus and a living expense of $1,500 per month. Recipients are expected to be in residence during the tenure of the award and are encouraged to participate in the activities of the University.

The Center's holdings include, in addition to a comprehensive library to support the study of Greek and Latin inscriptions, Arthur and Joyce Gordon's photographs and squeezes of Latin inscriptions, J.K. Evans's photo archive of Latin inscriptions from north Italy, J.M.R. Cormack's papers, photographs, and squeezes of inscriptions from Macedonia, Sterling Dow's and A.G. Woodhead's collections of offprints, and other materials, including numerous squeezes of Greek inscriptions.

Applications are now being received for academic year 1999-2000. There is no application form, and instead applicants are requested to submit a CV and a brief research proposal (not to exceed three pages) to Professor Stephen V. Tracy, Center for Epigraphical and Palaeographical Studies, The Ohio State University, 190 Pressey Hall, 1070 Carmack Road, Columbus, OH 43210-1002. The applicant should also arrange to have two letters of recommendation sent to the Director. Deadline for receipt of application materials: January 31, 1999.

WEB PROBLEMS:
epigraph-l and Cornell Greek Epigraphy Project Offline
by Tom Elliott
(November 24, 1998)

Two separate and unrelated web server crashes have recently affected the epigraphic world. David Meadows, who administers the epigraph-l discussion list, reports that his server is down due to a hardware failure. Until he can have the system repaired, the epigraph-l list will be on hiatus. Kevin Clinton reports that the web server hosting the Cornell Greek Epigraphy Project's web site, Nancy Kelly's Delphi Bibliography, John Mansfield's Infimae Aetatis page (checklists of sources for ICE/ICI on the PHI Documentary CD #7), and other resources has suffered a catastrophic disk failure. The Project is currently exploring options: to replace the disk, or replace the entire server. Until a solution is found and implemented, these resources will be unavailable.

Changes in these situations will be announced as soon as they are known at:
